The North Pacific Bondholders Safa, PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 .- As in connection with the suspension of Jay Cooke & Co., many holders of Northern Pacific railroad bonds throughout the country will naturally feel concerned about their investment, inquiry has been made and developed the fact that the North Pacific is largely indebted to its fiscal agents, and therefore can lose nething necessarily by refore can lose nothing pecuniarily by their suspension. The railroad company will have to make other financial arran ments before pushing forward its line. It has its completed road and government land grant both mortgaged to secure its bonds, and the security is considered amply

The Why and the Wherefore,

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Tribune says the Philadelphia house of Jay Cooke & Co. were under large indebtedness to railroad companies, involving large sums of money, preventing them from maintaining the reserve ordinarily kept, and they were unable, therefore, to respond to the demands of their creditors. For this reason they were unable to return to the New York house advances made them by the latter, or to supply them with any collaterals available in New York at the present time. Owing to this the cash balances became expansied and suspension became inevitable. Fahnestock, a member of the firm says: Of course different members of the firm are possessed of a large amount of private and personal property, but none of this was available in an emergency such as pecied shortly from Count de Chambord, this was available in an emergency such as the present. He was not at the present time, nor any member of the firm, prepared to tell the exact amount of liabilities or assets of the firm. He b lieved all creditors would be paid in full, and hoped that the suspension would only be temporary. On this point nothing positively can be said at present and some time must necessarily elapse before the exact amount of private property of the firm can be decided.

The Effect of the Failure, A Herald reporter interviewed Mr. Bliss of Norton, Bliss & Co., relative to the effect the failure of Jay Cooke & Co. would have on the market. He said the effect in the country will be felt a good deal, for these Northern Pacific bonds have been disposed of North, South, East and West. The country banks will feel the pressure, Jay Cooke & Co. promise a statement | and of course there will be much alarm among country depositors; but after all, this collapse is not about to cause serious evils. These rumors, false as they were, made the rounds, growing has ordered nearly all of their passenger in evil influence as they became more and more distorted. The crowning rumor of the day was this time, unfortunately, too true. Jay Cook & Co, Government fiscal agents, who had stood so high in financial circles throughout the world were impaired by reason of their connections with the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and probably be obliged to suspend. This rumor, which was in the air early in the morning, spread like wild fire, but although dealers were disposed to believe almost anything, it was still rather difficult to convince the street that the foremost American banking house in this country was not able to meet its obligations. Of course measures were immediately taken to verify the statement, and at noon it was officially announced that Jay Cooke & Co. had suspended. This news was immediately flashed over the wires of the Stock and God Indicator, around which groups business of Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co., had been hovering all the forenoon, and the dispatch was read to all within hearing. The effect was electric, and Jay Cooke & Co.'s offices were crowded with an anxious throng. At about 1 P. M., when the news became generally known, the sidewalks of Wall, Nassan and Broad streets were thronged with a mixed assemblage of people. A few of these had any pecuniary interests involved, but having nothing else to do concluded they could as well afford to spend their time there as elsewhere. These formed a swaying, agitated and excited mass, which it was difficult to penetrate. The crowd stretched over the sidewalks into the centre of the street and even filled basements of contiguous buildings. Not content with their places they clambered over the railings, filled the basement, peer d through windows, and even invaded offices So intolerable became the nulsance that bankers were obliged to have a detachment of police and detectives, the former to disperse the crowd and the latter to nullify the operations of pickpockets and sneak-thieves, who were on hand to avail themselves of any opportunity for plunder. Officers were then permanently stationed around the entrances with or-

FURNACES AND ROLLING MILLS.

A "Blast" From T. M. Brennan. To the Union and American: Sir: Your correspondent, Mr. Sigman persists in forcing himself upon the notice of the public, and if he did so without dragging others in, he might accomplish some good—what his object or purpose is, no one seems to know at present. He is operating by detail, first trying to use up Col. Colyar, and now points his steel at me, I had no idea such a person was in existence until I foolishly replied to his very foolish letter; nor do I now desire to continue a correspondence in which there is neither glory or profit for you or myself. As to my qualifications as a mining of manufacturing engineer, should I need an extra diploma, I would hereby apply to Mr. Sigman. If it is important for aim to be educated on the point set forth in his letter, will be glad to see him at my office and furnish such information as he desires, and that I am possessed of, and prove that "blast furnaces and rolling mills can be made eminently successful in Nashville, and without the aid of either Mr. Sigman, or your humble servant, T. M. BRENNAN.

The News About Town. FINE DRAWING. COLUMBIA, Sept. 18, 1873 .- We notice hanging up in the rostoffice at this place, a drawing of the sow "Attle Bryant," property of Jaz. P. Baird, two years old, citizens to the North, the Louisville railroad | weight 508 pounds. The drawing was done by Esq. Tom A. Harris, of Mt. Pleas coaches to this end of the road to accom- aut, and is encased in a large gilt frame.

ALHAMBRA. Some three weeks sgo we noticed the sale of the "Alhambra Saloon," o :ce the property of T. A. (Black) Thompson, deceased, of this city, but was re-sold last Monday to Dr. Jas. Akin, Walter Akin and Jas. R. Hodge, recently clerk of Sperry Bailey & Co., of your city, for $3,060. Al-len Powell, the old clerk of Black Thompson, is employed by the above owners as bar tender. It looks natural to see Allen again behind the counter with Runt Hodge. This is one of the finest saloons in the South, and with Hodge and Powell behind the bar, it is bound to keep up its old repu
